The editor of the Clarksville Patriot,
J. J. Buck, E. q., is a candidate for Congress in the Sixth district, against Arnell.
He claims that the convention at Johnsonville was a packed concern, and that "the first demonstration was the insolent article from the Knoxville Whig, assailing Northern men, thrust in the face of each arriving delegate, to prove that Gov. Brownlow demanded the nomination of Mr. Arnell." Mr. Back intimates that a considerable amount of corruption was considerable amount of corruption was used in order to secure friends for Arnell, used in order to secure friends for Arnell, and that the government effices had been used with such lavish profusion as rewards for the supporters of Arnell, that the same offices had been promised each to half a dozen different men. Mr. Back claims that the convention by which he was nominated, represented "a mejority of the district delegate vote." He says: "We reserve for the future the expression of our motives and the reasons for our present attitude in this assumed complication of political affairs in the Sixth district, and propose to manage the same without the vicious interference and slanders of the Knoxville Whig and the Nashville Press and Times." London Correspondence of Leeds Mercury)

Very alarming stories have been affoat for the last few days, respecting the possibility of a Fenian attempt upon the life of the Queen. The fear of such a crime was very strong last Wednesday, when Her Majesty laid the foundation stone of St. Thomas' Hospital, a letter having been received by the authorities stating that an attempt to assassinate her was to be made as she crossed Westminster Bridge. The precautions adopted by the chiefs at Scotland yard and the Home office to prevent any such outrage as that threatened were of the most extensive character. No fewer than five thousand policemen were on duty along the route taken by the Queen and in and about the hospital. At least half of these were in plain clothes. We may hope that the letter which induced these precautions was simply hoax. At any rate the only suspicious circumstances observed during the day was the presence in the London Correspondence of Leeds Mercury) ring the day was the presence in the crowd that had assembled to see the Queen pass of a number of the Golden Square Fesians. When Her Majesty went down to Balmoral the same rumors were floating about, produced by the MATSVILLE, KY., April 11, 1868. My name is B. D. Nixon. When the war broke out I was living near Owingsville, in Bath county. I entered into the Confederate service in 1862, and served for some time on the body guard of General H. Marshall. I afterward joined Thomas Johnson's buttation. I was regular culiated, never belonged to any band of grantless of partitions and in what I of guerrillas or partisans, and in what I did in furtherance of the Confederate cause acted under the orders of my superiors. Late in the spring or early in the summer of 1864, I entered the State of Kentucky with John Morgan's com-mand when he made his last raid into this State. I was at the battle of Cynarated from my command. The vigilance of the Federal soldiers prevented me from immediately rejoining my command or leaving the State, and I spent several weeks in Scott and Owen counties while watching an opportunity of leaving the State. During this time I participated in no acts of boatility against the Government, nor did I molest any private citizen, nor did I have any connection with any predatory bands. In July an opportunity was afforded me for leaving the State, and in going out I stopped to see my family, whom I had not seen for eleven months. I had been only two days at home, when I was caponly two days at home, when I was cap-tured by Lieutenant Denton, and was taken to Mt Sterling and made to work

Singular Freak of Nature.

The Leroy (New York) Gazette is re-sponsible for a rather "tough" descrip-tion of a remarkable specimen of horse firsh owned by Seneca Scott, of that place. The Gazette says: "The horse walks on his fore lega and keeps his hind ones constantly in play, as if he were actually using them also for locomotion.
One of his fore legs is shaped just like a One of his fore legs is shaped just like a horse's hind leg, and has a perfectly symmetrical gambril joint, just like any horse's hind leg. Strange to say, with this leg he does his kicking, and accomplishes his hostility with as much grace and accomplishment as any horse of his pretensions and breeding. His physical structure otherwise is not out of keeping with other horses. But the chief oddity of this singular horse remains to be described. He has on the end of his nose—or more properly on his end of his nose—or more properly on his upper lip—a bandsome, full and fashionable mustache, which curis outward with a flourish equal to that of the most finished Broadway, 'exquisite.'
